

SUMMARY

Tabenantha iboga is an understory species occurring in some specific low elevation forest in Gabon, Congo and Cameroon. The spiritual properties of the species and their implication in the Bwiti tradition have led to the wild harvesting of this species, which may be endangered if the trend is maintained.

Today the plant is known for its healing properties in modern and traditional medicine. These include anti-addictive properties with respect to cocaine, heroin, alcohol, nicotine, methadone and also is used in helping those who are suffering from depression, anxiety and trauma.

If we don't act now, the extinction of iboga is looming on the horizon.

Let's take a step to protect and preserve these precious plants.

If you are an iboga provider in Japan or you involve in the scarce wood in one or two and iboga has helped you in life realize many things, we called upon you all to assist/donate in one or two ways to support our projects which we have already started so as maintain iboga sustainability. BWITI TEACHINGS

In Bwiti, everything holds deep meaning. It's the journey of awakening the unconscious, a path to realization.

Bwiti teaches us that every action we take and every word we speak is a sacred ritual.

Bwiti liberates us by awakening the parts of ourselves that may keep us imprisoned within our minds, the constraints of the system and our viices.
